Heating

Heating with a thermostat

Your villa is heated by an underfloor heating system. If you turn the white edge of the thermostat and wait a moment, you will see the number in the display increase or decrease. You can then set the heating to the desired temperature. Please note that underfloor heating is a slow heating system. This means that it takes some time to warm up and cool down again. We therefore advise you to choose a fixed temperature during your stay and not to turn it down in the evening and then up again in the morning. The thermostat is set to 20.5 degrees Celsius. A temperature that most people find pleasant.

Heating with fireplace

The gas fire can be switched on and off by remote control.

Igniting the gas fire

Press the off button and the "large flame" button at the same time. When you hear the "beep" signal, release the buttons. The burner runs through a programme and now starts automatically. Note: This takes about 20 seconds.

Switch off the gas fire.

Push on the off button.

As the gas fire was switched off, a waiting time of 5 minutes was taken into account before the gas fire was possibly reignited.

Setting the flame height

Set flame height

Hold the "large flame" at the flame height that is gradually condemned.

Hold the "small flame" to gradually reduce and / or restore the flame height. Change to the pilot flame position.

Ensure good ventilation when using the gas fire. Therefore, always keep the ventilation grilles in your windows open. If you have closed your curtains, we recommend that you keep the window in the kitchen ajar.

Warning! When the temperature of the gas fireplace has warmed your house at or above the temperature of the thermostat, the underfloor heating automatically comes out of the rooms on the floors that are not heated to the sea.

The gas fireplace is warm.

Therefore, never put the distance op in the fire.

Arrival information

Entrance Doors

To ensure your privacy and to protect your valuables, the front and back doors of your home are fitted with multi-point locks. With a multi-point lock, you keep all uninvited guests out. With a normal lock with a single locking point, burglars can still sometimes penetrate the lock. With this closure this is impossible. This way you can easily leave your valuables in the house, while you enjoy the surroundings. The opening and closing process requires some explanation, which you can read below.

Locking the front door

In order to turn the key, you first have to raise the door handle until you hear a click. Once this is done, you can lock the door.

Opening and closing the sliding door

At the back of the house is a sliding door. It consists of two doors, with one having a turning knob.

To open the sliding door:

1. First, turn the knob to the left
2. Then, turn the handle of the door with turning knob downward.
3. Turn the handle of the door without the knob downwards to open this door as well.

To close the sliding door:

1. Slide the door without the rotary knob closed until it stops and turn the lever up
2. Slide the door with the rotary knob closed as well and turn the lever upward
3. Lock the door again by turning the knob to the right.
